NEW HEADLIGHT LAW IN RF. FECT MAY 1

Henry A. Shorey, Jr., chief of the notor vehicle inspection department of the State Highway Commission, says that the last Legislature engeted cortain provisions which radically change the situation in regard to headlights on motor vehicles and directed that the State Highway Commission prepare rules and regulations governing the adjustment, use and operation of lights on vehicles.

"Some of the rules and regulations are na follows:

"On and after May 1, 1922, no electric headlight shall be used on any motor vehicle on the highways of this State unless the same is equipped with a device designed to prevent glaring rays which shall hereafter be approved by the Highway Commission.

"Any manufacturer or dealer in a device designed to prevent glaring headlights may make application to the commission for the approval of said device. The expense, $50, shall be paid by the person asking for the test.

The commission may issue certificates of approval for headlight testing stations in various parts of the State if li is satisfied upon examination that the person or persons in charge of such stations are competent to adjust such levices.

Early English History.

The reason that the Norman conquest did not subjugate the English is explained by the fact that "Jutes, Angles, Saxons, Danes and Normans' were all kindred in race and so they united in one race; the Welsh, Irish and Scots were of the Celtle race. The Normans were not Frenchmen in the beginning but pirates from Scandinavia, who had come to France and had been given a tract of land. They The prevailing epidemic is having adopted the French language and became in time the most courteous and poble people in Europe, but when they won the buttle of Hastings, they were more nearly akin to the English or Anglo-Saxous than to the French, although they brought the French language to England, and many of their words were incorporated into the language. Because of racial differences the Welsh, Irish and Scotch did not unite with the English as easily, but the centuries have obliterated many racial characteristics because of many Fig I Ladd was in Rumford one day intermarriages, St. Louis Globe-Dem-

It has been our privilege in years past to tax bank stock. Our valuation of bank stock for the year 1921 was $21,000; and brought us an income of $672.00. By the passage of a bill by the last legislature this sum is to be taken from us, and in return we shall receive from the state-which will collect this tax-$365.00. Thus we lose $307.00. To be sure, this is not a large amount, but the taking of a little here and a little there puts beavier burdens on the small taxpayer. While we have reason to criticise con-

Protobles development that is being encouraged in the famous Petalama positry district is the consignment : sale of cockerels. In this the poultry preeders have been following the lend of other growers of high-class live stock. Cattle breeders have been holding bull sales for a number of years; sheep breeders have ram salen; hog breeders have sales of boars and of bred sows. In the case of cockerels no pedigree papers are supplied, as they are with other kinds of purebred live stock, but aworn affidavits as to breeding go with each bird.

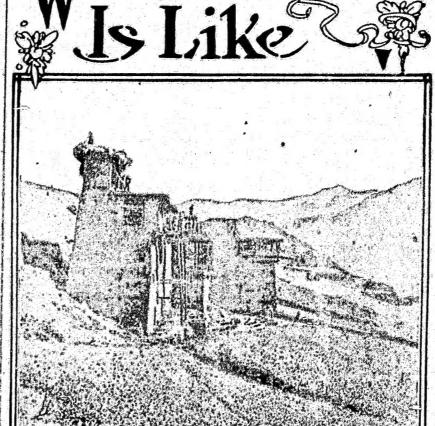

A White Leghorn cockerel sale was held in Sonoma county (the Petniuma district) October 15. The 14 Pacific coast breeders who consigned birds gave aworn statements as to their breeding. According to the county agent, who was instrumental in putling on this sale, most of the 52 cockerels consigned represented unusually high breeding, many of them baving pedigrees extending back eight rible examples. Yet, the most of us or also generations with trap-nest records. Most of them had inheritance records of more than 275 eggs in a rear and some more than 300. KATHLEEN NORRIS

espright by Kathleen Hereis

CHAPTER I.—With his two daughters, Alix and Cherry, the latter just eighteen years old, and his niece, Anne, Doctor Strickland, retired, is living at Mill Valley, a short distance from San Francisco. His closest friend is Peter Joyce, something of a recluse. Visiting in the vicinity, Martin Lloyd, mining engineer, falls, in love with and secretly becomes engaged to Cherry.

CHAPTER II.—While the family is speculating as to Lloyd's intentions. Cherry brings him to supper, practically announcing her engagement to him.

CHAPTER III.—Doctor Strickland feels Cherry is too young to marry and urges her to wait at least a year, but the girl coaxes him into agreeing to an immediate wedding and the ceremony takes place, the couple leaving at once for El Nido, where Martin is employed.

CHAPTER IV.—The honeymoon days over, Cherry begins to feel a vague dissatisfaction with Martin and the monotony of her daily life.

CHAPTER V. At Mill Valley, Justin Little, lawyer, becomes engaged to Anne, the wedding being set for September, some months distant. Alix visits Cherry at El Nido and the two girls coax Martin into allowing Cherry to go home for Anne's wedding.

CHAPTER VI.—In her father's house Cherry contrasts the peaceful, happy life there with her rather sordid existence at El Mido and realizes that her marriage has been something of a failure. Doctor Strickland, feeling that Cherry is not being fair to Marthi, in that she is unduly protonging her visit after Anne's wedding, urges her to return to her husband, she makes preparations for her departure.

CHAPTER VII.—Peter Joyce tells Cher-y he has had one "grand passion" in his life, but the woman was not for him. He loes not reveal her name. Cherry rejoins har husband.

CHAPTER VIII.—The young wife's dis-satisfaction increases and there is an al-most open break. Martin has a brief spell of sickness and something of her old feel-ing for him returns to Cherry.

CHAPTER IX.—Doctor Strickland is stricken suddenly with what all perceive is a fatal illness. Alix summons Cherry to her father's dealabed. After the doctor's death it is discovered that years ago he had borrowed money from Anne's father and seemingly the debt was never discharged. With accumulated interest the amount practically consumes all the money the doctor left. Justin Little makes it manifest that he will insist on his wife's claims. It means that the two girls are left with practically nothing.

CHAPTER X.-I eter Joyce, who has seen on a trip practically around the world, returns, not having learned of the doctor's death. He licars of Anne's position with regard to the money with deep disgust. Allx has the home and is making a fair living singing. Joyce urges her to marry him. She consents and they have a simple wedding and go to Joyce's home to live, ideally happy.

CHAPTER XI.—Martin and Cherry leave El Nido and go to Red Creek, a change somewhat for the better, but Cherry retains the old feeling of dissatisfaction. She visits Peter and Alix, and while there comes to a realization that she loves Peter. Though she has never known it, Cherry is the woman whom Peter had in mind when he told her of his "grand passion." He has never ceased to love her, and the situation now becomes tragic.

CHAPTER XII.—Peter confesses his love to Cherry, and she admits a like feeling for him. A situation bordering on hidden guilt is created. In the doctor's Bible Alix ands a receipt for the money he had borrowed. Anne's claim falls to the ground and Alix and Cherry are mancially independent, Heartbroken over their tragic position, Peter vainly seeks a solution which shall make for the mutual happiness of Cherry and himself, but there seems no way.

CHAPTER XIII.—Mrs. North, Martin Lloyd's aunt, has her suspicions concern-ing Peter and Cherry and the lovers feel the danger of the situation.

CHAPTER XIV.—Joyce urges Cherry to leave Martin and go away with him to some remote part of the world where they can live their lives together. She finally consents, recling that Alix will for-give, and Peter makes arrangements for their journey.

CHAPTER XV.—The day of their departure arrives. Peter had gone into San Prancisco, where Cherry was to meet him on the steamer. Actually on her way te the boat Cherry meets Martin, who has left his situation at Red Creek and is on his way to her. Terrorstricken, she manages to get word to Peter and goes back to Alix's home with Martin. On the way she musters courage sufficient to tell him the truth about her feeling for him. Martin professes himself unable to understand her grievances.

CHAPTER XVI.—Apprising Alix of the situation between himself and Cherry, Martin insinuates that someone has been making love to Cherry. Alix indignantly repudiates the idea, and Martin has no conception of the real truth. Later, some observations made by Martin, and her own intuition, force Alix to a realization of the love existing between Peter and Cherry. Heartbroken, one passes the night wandering in the woods, unable to make up her mind as to the course she will pursue.

CHAPTER XVII.—Cherry gets an anon-ymous letter from Red Creek coupling Martin's name with that of a woman manned Hatty Woods. She shows the let-ter to Alix, and the latter questioning Martin, he practically admits the truth of the accusation. Divorce is now openly talked of. Peter and Cherry arrange to go away together Hunday, two days distant.

Peter nodded, folded his arms across his chest, and stared into the early dark. There was no other way to go than past the very spot where the horfor had occurred, but Thompson told his wife later that poor Joyce had not seemed to know it when they passed It. Nor did he give any evidence of emotion when they reached the old Strickland house and entered the old hallway where Cherry had come nying in, a few short years ago, with Martin's first kiss upon her lips. Two doctors, summoned from San Francisco, were here, and two nurses. Martin had been laid upon a basilly moved had in the old study, to be spared the narrow stairs. The room was metamorphosed, the whole house moved about it as about a pivot, and there was no thought but for the man who lay, sometimes mogning and sometimes ominously still, waiting for death

"He cannot live!" whispered Cherry, ghastly of face, and with the utter chaos of her soul and brain expressed by her tumbled frock and the carelessly pushed back and knotted masses of her hair, "His arm is broken, Peter, and his leg crushed-they don't dare touch him! And the surgeon says the spine, too-and you see his head! Oh, God! It is so terrible," she said in agony, through shut teeth, knotting her hands together; "It is too terrible that he is breathing now, that life is there now, and that they cannot hold

She led Peter into the sitting room, where the doctors were walting. "Is there any hope?" he asked, when Cherry had gone away on one of the restless, unnecessary journeys with which she was filling the endless hours. One man shook his head, and in the silence they heard Martin groan.

"It is possible he may weather it of course," the older man said doubtfully. "He is coming out of that first stupor, and we may be able to tell better in a short time. The fact that he Is living at all indicates a tremendous vitality."

Cherry came to the door to say "Doctor!" on a burst of tears. The physicians departed at once to the study, and Peter was immediately summoned to assist them in handling the big frame of the patient. Martin was thoroughly conscious now; his face chalk white. Cherry, agonized, knelt beside the bed, her frightened eyes moving from face to face.

There was a brief consultation, then Cherry and Peter were banished. Peter watched her with a confused sense that the whole frightful day had been a dream. Once she looked up and met his eyes.

"He can't live," she said in a whis-"Perhaps not," · Peter answered very low. Cherry returned to her somber musing. "We didn't see this end to it, did we?" she said with a pitiful smile Liter a long while.

"Oh, no-no!" Peter said, shutting his eyes and with a faint, pegative movement of his head,

"Poor Cherry-if I could spare you all this!" knotting his fingers and feeling for the first time the prick of bitter tears against his eyelids.

"Oh, there is nothing you can do," she said faintly and wearly after a while. And she whispered, as if to the hills, ip the cemetery-this was herself, "Nothing-nothing-nothing !"

CHAPTER XIX.

It was all strange and bewildering, thought Peter. It was not like anything he had ever connected in his the man who drove them quickly tothoughts with Alix, yet it was all for

The day was warm and still, and flowers and packed with people. Womtoo, rather to his dazed surprise. The organ was straining through the warm, fragrant air, and the old clergyman, whose venerable, leonine head, in its crown of snowy hair, Peter could see clearly, spoke in a voice that was thickened with tears, Strangers, or almost strangers, had been touching Peter's hand respectfully, ilmidly, had been praising Allx. She had been "good" to this one, "good" to that one, they told him; she had always been so "Interested" and so "happy."

Her coffin was buried in flowers. many of them the plain flowers she loved, the gillies and stock and verbena, and even the sweet, sober wallflowers that were somehow like herself. But It was the roses that scented the whole world for Alix today, and fresh creamy buds had been placed between the waxen fingers. And still that radiant look of triumphant love lingered on her quiet face, and still the faint ghost of a smile touched the once kindly and merry mouth. They said good by to her at the church, the villagers and old friends who had loved her, and Peter and two or three men alone followed her down along the winding road that led to the old cemetery. Cherry was hanging over the bedside of her husband, who still miraculously lingered through hours of pain, but as Peter, responsive to a touck on his arm, crossed the church porch to blindly enter the waiting motor car, he saw, erect and grave, on the front seat, in his decent holiday black, and with his felt hat held in his bands. Kow. claiming his right to stand beside the grave of the mistress he had loved and served so faithfully. The aight of him, in his clumsy black, instead of the usual crisp white, and with a sad and tear-stained face shopk Peter strangely, but he did not show a sign of pain. The twisted low branches of oak trees threw shadows on the grave when they finally reached it, and sheep were cropping the watered grass of the graveyard. The soft autumn sky, the drift of snowy clouds across the blue, the clear shadows on brown grass under the cake, all these were familiar. But Peter still looked dazedly at his black cuft and at the turned earth next to the doctor's headstone, telling himself again that this was for Allx. How often he had seen her altting there, with her bright face sobered and sweet, as she talked lovingly, engerly of her fallier! They had often come here, Peter the more willing. y because alse was so sensible and happy about it; she would pack lunch. button herself late one of the crisp blue ginghams, chatter on the road, another, would breathe more easily. In her usual fashion. And if, for a lit was inevitable, she knew that now few moments, the train of memory but it was not to be this fired by the sight of the old dector's was not to be this hour!

of her, and that Peter had seen her use to this very father years ago!

He remembered her, a tall, awkward girl, with a volume of Dickens slipping from her lap as she sat on a hassock by the fire, tensing her father, scolding and repreaching him. Biazing red on her high cheekbones, untidy black hair, quick tongue and ready laugh; that was the Alix of the old days, when he had criticized and patronized ber, and told her that she should be more like Anne and little

He remembered being delegated, one day, to take her into town to the dentist, and that upon discovering that the dentist was not in his office, he had taken her to the circus instead. She had been about thirteen, and had eaten too many peanuts, he thought, and had lost a pettleont in full sight of the grandstand. But how grateful and happy she had been!

"Dear little old blue petticent!" he sald. "Dear little old madcap Alix-!" There was silence, the silence of inanition, about him. He came to himself with a start. He was up on

This Was Alix's Grave, Newly Covered With Flowers,

Alix's grave, newly covered with wilting masses of flowers, and he was keeping everybody waiting. He murmured an apology; the walting men were all kindness and sympathy.

He got back into the meter car; ward the valley talked easily and stendily to Peter, attempting to laterest him in the affairs of some water the little church was packed with company in San Francisco. When they got to the valley a city train was aren were crying, and men were crying, riving, and Peter saw people looking at him furtively and sorrowfully. He remembered the many, many times Allx had walted for him at the trains: he glanced toward the big madrane under which she always parked her car. She was usually deep in a book us he crossed from the train, but she would fling it into the back seat and make room for him beside her. The dog would bound into the tonneau, Alix would hand her husband his mall, the car would start with a great plunge toward the mountain-toward the cool garden high up on the ridge-

Cherry looked small and pathetic in her fresh black, and her face was marked by secret incessant weeping. But the nurses and doctors could not say enough for her self-control; she was always composed, always quietly helpful and calm when they saw her, and she was always busy. From early morning, when she slipped into the sick-room, to stand looking at the unconscious Martin with a troubled, intent expression that the nurses came to know well, until night, she moved untiringly about the quiet, shaded house. She supervised the Chinese boy, saw that the nurses had their hours for rest and exercise, telephoned, dusted and arranged the rooms, saw callers sweetly and patiently, filled vases with flowers.

Every day she had several vigils in the sick-room, and every day at least one long talk with the doctors. Every afternoon and evening had its callers; she and Peter were rarely alone.

Martin was utterly unconscious of the life that flowed on about him: sometimes he seemed to recognise Cherry, and would stare with painful intentness into her face, but after a few seconds his gaze would wander to the strange nurses, and the room that he had never known, and with a puzzled sigh he would close his eyen again, and drift back into his own strange world of pain, fever and unconsciousness.

Almost every day there was the sudden summons and panic in the old house, Peter going toward the sickroom with a thick beating at his heart. Cherry entering, white-faced and with terrifled eyes, doctors and nurses gathering noiselessly near for the last scene in the drams of Martin's suffering. But the release did not come.

There would be murmuring among the doctors and nurses; the pulse was gaining, not loaing, the apparently fatal, final symptoms were proving neither fatal nor final. The tension would relax; a doctor would go, a nurse allp from the room; Cherry, looking anxiously from one face to but it was not to be this minute; at "This!" he echoed aghast. "Oh, I think this is punishment," Cherry continued, in the same lifeless, venry tone.

There was a sllence, The rain dripped and dripped from the redwoods, the room in which they stood was in twilight, even at noon. Peter could think of nothing to bay.

About two weeks after the accident there was a change in the tone of the physicians who had been giving almost all their time to Martin's case. There was no visible change in Martin, but that fact in itself was so surprising that it was construed into a definite hope that he would live,

Not as he had lived, they warned his wife. It would be but a restricted life; tied to his couch, or permitted, at best, to move about within a small boundary on crutches.

"Martin!" his wife exclaimed piteously, when this was first discussed, "He has always been so strong-so independent! He would rather-he would infinitely rather be dead!" But her mind was busy grasping the possibilities, too. "He won't suffer too much?" she asked fearfully.

They hastened to assure her that the chance of his even partial recovery was will slight, but that in caseof his convalencemer Martin need not necessirily suffer.

Another day or two went by in the silent, rain-wrapped house under the trees; days of quiet footsteps and whispering, and the lisping of word fires. Then Martin suddenly was con- | muscle. scious, knew his life, languidly smiled at her, thanked the doctors fer occasional case from pain.

"How ald she ever happen to do 16?" Cherry said. "She was always so sure ! of herself-even when she drove fast" to say about the scout movement: "I don't know," he answered. "It was all like a flash, of course: I heart and soul. It is an organization never watched her drive-I had such confidence in her!"

His interest dropped; she saw that the tide of pain was slowly rising again," and glanced at the clock. It

In his own eyes she saw reflected the apprehension of her own, "You might ask Peter to play some of that-that rambly stuff he was playing yesterday?" he suggested. Cherry, only too happy to have him want anything, to have him helped by anything, flew to find Veter. Busy with one of the trays that were really beginning to interest and please the invalld now, she told herself that the house was a different place, now that one purse was gone, the doctors coming only for brief calls, and the dear, familiar sound of the old plane echolog through the rooms.

Martin came from the flery furnace changed in soul and body. It was a thin, gentle, strangely patient mun who was propped in bed for his Thanksgiving dinner, and whose painworn face turned with an appreciative smile to the decorations and the gifts that made his room cheerful,

The heavy cloud lightened slowly but steadily; Martin had a long talk, dreaded by Cherry from the first hours of the accident, with his physicians. He bore the ultimating with unexpected fortitude.

"Let me get this straight," he said alowly, "The arm is O. K. and the leg but the back-".

Scouts of America.)

Lorne W. Barclay, national director of the department of education, who was recently made a Knight of the Legion of Honor in consideration of his work in the devastated regions of France, sent the following communication to the national council headquarters:

"The Boy scout camps in France are now closing, and the French boys are cheering for the good times they have had. We have 40 boys who have not been adopted by troops in America. Here is an opportunity for your troop to have a representative in scouting in France. Expenses have been advanced by friends for these boys and we shall be glad to assign them to you for adoption on receipt of a contribution of twenty-five dollars per French boy, It is not too inte for this work must continue. Is it possible for your troop to co-operate in helping one of the boys in France? In so doing you will do a 'good turn' which will always continue to 'turn' for scents and scouting. Send your communications to the American Committee for Devastated France, 10 East 30th Street, New York City."

The memorial window unveiled for Rev. Dr. Charles Townsend, for nearly twenty years pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Orange, N. Doctor Townsend was the founder of the troop organization in the church, and the window is the gift of the scouts in loving memory of their leader who died in 1914. The window portrays the incident of Christ feeding the multitude, and recelving the loaves and fishes from the hand of the boy whom Andrew, the disciple, brings to the master, a theme once treated by Doctor Townsend in a scout anniversary sermon, begin. Both the railroads and the farm ers are always saying to Uncle Sam that if you will do "so and so" we will be all right. This has been going on for at least a generation with the result that it has been proved that Uncle Sam is a poor physician. His patients are sallyated, their joints creak, and they look as though any more medicine might kill them. A few months ago the Administration pointed out that the only way the country could recover from its financial biccoughs was through measures to suance the railroads. More than seven hundred millions of dollars has been paid to the railroads in connection with the period of public contrel, and this small sugar-coated pill has apparently had no effect on the patient. One day they have marketing measure, the next day they regulate the packers, the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal highways. Uncle Sam as a physleist gives them everything they ask for. But it all seems of no avail.

For a good many years a large group of strong-minded men have preached the doctrine that constant legislative interference would eventually kill any of Uncle Sam's patients. The farmers and the railroads seem to be striking evidences of the proof of this belief. Even Benators are recommending to the sick industries o the country that they 'try the economic law'' instead of the levislative pulliative. They point out that fixed rates and definitely prescribed methods of conducting the railroads amounts to nothing less than "pricafixing," oven though it is termed "government control." WALDEN'S DOG TEAM

The following composition was written by Miss Elizabeth Mason for the language period on the day of Mr. Walden's visit in Bethel.

Last week at Berlin, N. H., a carrival was held for three days. The most interesting part of the car nival was the 120 mile dog race. The entries were Arthur Walden's team of Wonalancet, N. H.; Jaques Sucanne's team of Lake Placid, N. Y. John Lebel's team from La Loutre, Canada, and Henri Skone's, also of Canada.

The race started in the morning at 0.30, last Thursday from Berlin. The Notch to Colebrook the first day, Walden's team made the trip in about seven and a half hours, arriving at Colebrook in fine condition. Lebel's team was in fair condition when its deatlly injured feet, because of a long journey from Canada to Berlin.

WOODROW WILSON FOUN-DATION

Origin of the Foundation

On Christmas Eve, 1920, a group of women met to consider what was then a nobulous wish to pay some sort of a their master. After a brief rest Mr. tribute to the man who was shortly to Walden went to the barn to prepare leave the White House. There was no doubt in their minds as to the verdict but once a day.
